Archbishop Blanch is a good school, where good teaching and pastoral care of an outstanding quality enable pupils to achieve well.

Pupils show outstanding levels of personal development, demonstrated by their excellent behaviour and maturity for their age.

The broad and balanced curriculum meets statutory requirements and provides well for the needs of all pupils, including those who are very able. Ofsted 2008

Pupils speak positively of the friendliness and approachability of staff, and of how much they enjoy school. They are made to feel safe and secure in a school which values all its members and has clear expectations for the part they all need to play in fostering an inclusive and welcoming Christian community. SIAS Ofsted 2008
